Destination information

Cadiz, which is known as 'Tacita de Plata', is considered the oldest city in the West. Its cathedral, specially the golden-tiled dome, fits perfectly with the city's colonial appearance. The old town has narrow streets with small squares and popular neighbourhoods such as La Viña (fishing quartier), Mentidero, Santa María (the true home of flamenco) and El Pópulo.

El Pópulo —the oldest neighbourhood in Cadiz— still features three entrance arches dating from the 13th century: Arco del Pópulo, Arco de la Rosa, and Arco de los Blancos. The Santa Cruz church and the Roman Theatre can also be found there. Zorrilla street, which is clustered with tapas bars, leads to the gardens of Alameda Apodaca and Parque Genovés. These places provide rest areas and viewpoints over the sea. In short, Cadiz is the perfect city for strolling around and the cobbled and narrow streets, the buildings with large windows and the beautiful courtyards are part of its charm.
