Destination information

Cartaya is well-known for its white sandy beaches, which are set within a nature reserve —surrounded by pine trees and marshes. Also worth mentioning is La Flecha, a sand strip formed by the accumulation of sediments from Río Piedras river. This accumulation has formed an unspoiled beach like no other in the Andalusian coast (access to the mouth of the River Piedras is not suitable for people with reduced mobility). The city has three urban areas: Cartaya, El Rompido and Nuevo Portil. El Rompido is a fishing village which has become a real gem for tourists due to the quality and beauty of the beaches. Nuevo Portil, on the other hand, gives visitors the chance to discover nature and enjoy active holidays (water sports, golf, etc).
